

United Way of Delaware: Building Stronger Communities Together

“When our family hit a difficult stretch, we suddenly needed help with things we had always managed on our own. We didn’t know where to turn, or even what kind of help was available.”

Across Delaware, families face challenges that rarely fit neatly into one category. A job loss can lead to difficulty paying rent. A childcare problem can make it harder to work. Financial stress can affect a child’s ability to succeed in school.

That’s why United Way of Delaware brings people and organizations together to address the interconnected challenges facing our communities.

Working alongside nonprofits, businesses, government agencies, schools, and community leaders, UWDE helps Delawareans find pathways to greater stability and opportunity. That means helping young children become strong readers through Get Delaware Reading, empowering individuals and families to build financial security through Stand By Me, and connecting people with essential services through Delaware 211.

For families, that network can mean knowing they don’t have to navigate a difficult moment alone.

“Finding the right support gave us room to get back on our feet. But more than that, it reminded us that our community was there for us.”

When we work together to support our communities, we make Delaware stronger for everyone.
